Lina Ghotmeh— Architecture

PARIS

2023 was a breakout year for Lebanese-born architect Lina Ghotmeh. In London, she unveiled her Serpentine Pavilion, a feat of community building and eco-friendly construction, with thin supports reminiscent of leaf veins and a pleated roof to shield gatherings. And in Normandy, she completed a low-carbon, energy-positive saddle workshop for Hermès (AD, September 2023). Both commissions expand upon her interests in handcraft, sustainability, and what she calls “the archaeology of the future,” wherein “every new gesture is drawn from the traces of the past.” Ghotmeh credits that fascination with ruins to her childhood in Beirut, a city in constant transition. These days, she’s catalyzing change around the world, from an art museum for Saudi Arabia’s AIUla cultural site to a tower in Montpellier, France. All the firm’s projects, she notes, “emerge as exquisite interventions that enliven memories and senses.” linaghotmeh.com —s.c.
